"I thoroughly enjoy coming into the University of Bolton to study Textiles and Surface Design knowing I'm supported by tutors who care. Smaller class sizes mean we are all able to have more one-to-one opportunities. The course has been informative and we have learnt so many new skills and developed our understanding on different processes. Having visiting tutors who have excelled in this sector, like Leigh Cooke, who designs for Hermes, and Salvatore Ferragamo, has been extremely insightful into the industry. Through the course we also have access to useful and leading software like photoshop, and websites like WGSN, the world's leading trend forecasting company, helping us excel further in the field."

"It has been amazing to witness the tremendous impact that this course and partnership has had on the students, their career journeys and the wider community. From the first Cohort of CMDA students who went through the End Point Assessment, 7 out of 9 students have successfully gained at least one promotion whilst studying on the course and applying their learning at interviews, some have had multiple promotions. The jobs they have progressed to include Senior Manager roles within the NHS. Many have led and implemented huge significant projects that have been pivotal to continued health care delivery for patients, using innovative means and skills learned during the CMDA displaying all the attributes of exceptional Chartered Managers."
